Developer Summer 2019
In the summer of 2019, I was asked to help on a new project concerning behaviour anomaly detection using artificial intelligence. My role in this project was writing a data pre-processor, so that its output could be used in machine learning models. This ongoing project is a collaboration between the Artificial Intelligence Lab of the Vrije Universiteit Brussels and NVISO, a Brussels-based cyber security company.

Accomplishments

Cyber Security Challenge Belgium Brussels
Winner of the CSI Game 2019
In 2019, our CTF team won the CSI Game, organised for pre-finalists that did not reach the finals. In this challenge, 26 competing teams were instructed to investigate a fictional security breach. Technical and interrogative skills were necessary to correctly fill in a questionnaire about the incident. Our team, which consisted of three colleagues and I, ended up as the winners of this challenge.

Nominated for startup prize 2018
In 2018, a friend and I participated in the first Belgian NLP Hackathon, organized by the Flemish Government. We were approached by Sopra Steria – a large consultancy firm – to join forces. After an intensive collaboration during the week-long event, we ended up being one of the two nominated teams for best startup.
